Fire Department Extension Possible

Some months ago George F. Hathaway, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, filed an application for an inspection of the fire protection facilities in Norway. A thorough inspection was made by engineers representing the New England Insurance Exchange. Norway is credited with 97 points from a possible 200 and only 3 points below Class C rating which the Corporation wishes for lowering insurance rates. Norway is in outlay could gain Class C with 8 per cent. The matter of a more efficient department with up to date apparatus and better protection for property beyond the hydrant zones, are matters worthy careful attention.

The carrying out of the following recommendations would allow sufficient credit to change the classification to Class C for minimum rates on dwelling house property.

First—That a 500 gallon per minute motor pumping engine equipped with either a 40-gallon chemical or a 60-gallon water tank be provided.

Second—That at least 1,000 feet of 2-1/2 inch double jacket hose be purchased and all hose to be tested to 200 pounds annually.

Third—That adequate fuse protection be provided on the charging and switch boards and also on battery terminals.

Fourth—That a manual break wheel transmitter with duplicate wheels for box and special signals be installed at the telephone exchange.

Fifth—That circuit and battery be tested daily. Individual voltage and electrolyte weekly boxes inspected monthly and after electrical storms; records to be kept of all tests and inspections.

The inspector informed Mr. Hathaway we have an efficient electrical signal system, good as can be found anywhere. The department is up to date and alive, and with a motor pump would be in a position to handle fires with greater dispatch and less property loss.

Mr. Hathaway and others believe the town would be willing to help purchase a fire truck. This apparatus would be available for protection in the rural districts and could speedily answer an alarm almost anywhere in town.

The cost would be insignificant in comparison to the value of the property which might be saved. The fact is pointed out, but a few rural homes have any water pressure, and a portable pump drawing from a well or brook would be a valuable asset in case of emergency.

Mr. Hathaway stated with a motorized pump, each fireman instead of running to his particular hose house and wasting valuable time, would go directly to the blaze. The apparatus would be there, ready for instant use with the men fresh and eager to jump into harness.

This matter will probably be taken up by the Corporation in the near future and the rural taxpayers will be invited to express themselves about a joint purchase.

Fire Department Called to West Paris
Norway Fire Department responded to a call from West Paris for help late Saturday evening. At the time it seemed the village was doomed, as at least four buildings were either in flames or burned to the ground. Forty-eight firemen under chief engineer Giles Frost were carried up on the Norway branch train and took the place of the volunteers who had fought the conflagration since 9:30 p. m. They returned about 2 o'clock Sunday morning.

Chief Frost received the call by telephone at 10:15. He immediately arranged for transportation on Llewellyn Street car. The engine and hose were on the way and the firemen were on the way.

The firemen left their apparatus in the car and manned the five lines of hose being used by the citizens volunteers. The fire was under control by 11:30 p. m. and the firemen returned to Norway station ready to entrain.

There was some delay in calling the train crew at South Paris and getting up steam. When the "dumie" reached the main line, nine miles were reeled off in rapid succession, less than an hour after the telephone call, the Norway firemen were established in their places and in charge of the situation.

Norway Girl Wins Prize

Miss Annie Monahan will be remembered as one of the early "Hello Girls" of this town. She had charge of the Public Library over Jim Crocker's store and the New England people put in a telephone exchange in connection with the library. She did double duty for a long time.

Competition with the Eastern Telephone Company came and the struggle for business was fierce but somehow the people liked the service of the New England Co. best as it was prompt and efficient. The other company tried to induce her to come over with them but she wouldn't. She stayed with the New England people until the fight was over.

She and her mother and sister went to Gardiner and Miss Monahan became manager of the Postal Telegraph and we notice she won the prize for the largest increase in business during two months' competitive period. This award was announced a short time ago. Of course she is pleased as well as her friends.

Community Gathering at Legion Rooms
Game night at American Legion rooms Wednesday evening was a successful social get-together, and one of the most enjoyable times thus far. This pleasant affair was under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary assisted by the Legion members, and attracted a large patronage. Some two hundred tickets had been sold in advance which netted a good sum for the service, and is popular with all patrons on his route. He is a prominent member of Oxford Castle Knights of Golden Eagle.

Local Shopping For Christmas
Shop windows are suggesting the approach of Santa Claus season. Many merchants are stocking heavily with Christmas gifts, and have a large variety from which to choose. Better read the ads carefully and get the habit of trading near home.

Up-to-date stores are the results of a Community spirit. Without this support merchants are unable to run a live business and display fresh stocks. An extensive traveler has said "Your stores indicate to me at least two conditions, namely: your living or dead." Make this part of Oxford County a live section when playing Santa Claus for the family. Its more satisfactory in the end.

Desecration-Schoff

Eugene A. Desecration and Carolyn E. Schoff were united in marriage early Thursday morning, Nov. 24th. The ceremony was performed at St. Catherine Church, South Paris by Rev. Fr. Redding. The double ring service was used. Helen Emerley of South Paris was bride's maid and Arthur Desecration, brother of the groom, was best man. The immediate families and Doris Karr of South Paris and Ella Smith were in attendance.

A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the groom and the couple were also guests of the family to the Thanksgiving dinner. They left on the afternoon train for a short journey, returning Monday they commenced keeping house in their newly furnished home in the Desecration house, lower Main St.

The bride is the daughter of Elmore Schoff of Norway. Before coming here from South Paris she attended Paris High School. For some time she has been a popular operator at the local telephone exchange.

Mr. Desecration is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Desecration and well known in the social and fraternal circles. Graduating for Norway High School in 1916 he served as instructor on the Norway "Paris Street" Ry. Later he was appointed one of the city letter carriers and was serving in this capacity when he enlisted in the Hospital Corps, receiving training in North and South Carolina. Mr. Desecration returned to the Post Office Department after his discharge from the service, and is popular with all patrons on his route. He is a prominent member of Oxford Castle Knights of Golden Eagle.

ACT QUICKLY

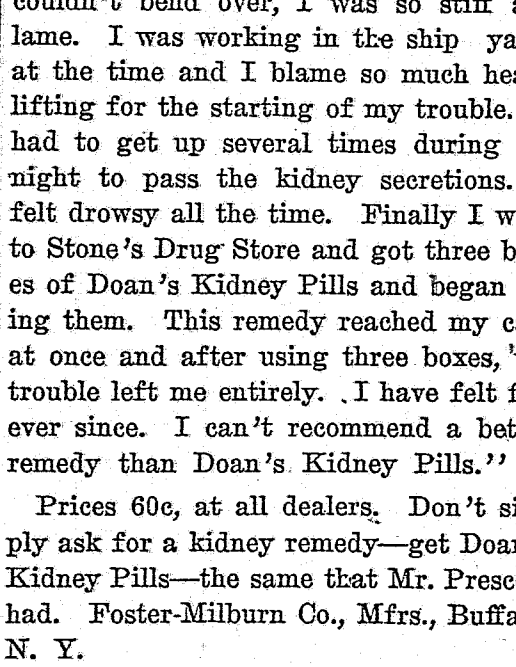

Do the right thing at the right time.
Act quickly in time of danger.

In time of kidney danger, Doan's Kidney Pills are most effective. Ask your neighbor.

Plenty of Norway evidence of their worth.

Albert F. Prescott, shoemaker, Crockett's Bridge, Norway, says: "My kidneys gave out and I had backache so bad it put me past going for several days. I couldn't bend over, I was so stiff and lame. I was working in the ship yards at the time and I blame so much heavy lifting for the starting of my trouble. I had to get up several times during the night to pass the kidney secretions. I felt drowsy all the time. Finally I went to Stone's Drug Store and got three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. This remedy reached my case at once and after using three boxes, the trouble left me entirely. I have felt fine ever since. I can't recommend a better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills."

Prices 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Prescott
had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mrs., Buffalo,

I WANT TO GO BACK TO DIXIE

I want to go back to Dixie,
To the old cabin home once more,
And see the old folks I miss so,
Out there on the Georgia shore.
An' play wid me brudder an' sistah
Agin on me ole favorite plain,
I weery of the Northland weery,
Take me back to Dixie agin.

I want to go back to Dixie,
I want to go back to Dixie,
And the North wind is cold,
As it rushes o'er mountain and plain,
Give me back my downy pillow,
In sweet Southern bowers,
Take me back to old Dixie agin.
I want to go back to Dixie,
I want to go back to Dixie,
An' visit pore ole unkie Joe,
He say w'en I leave 'im so lonely,
"Dese how 'twill turn out he doan kno',"
An' Dinah, I lef' 'er a-cryin',
My heart it is filled with pain,
You must stay, she say out dare,
Come back to old Dixie agin."

MA GOES SKATING

When Pa went out on the Ward's Pond ice,
And don't strike off at such a rate,
Remember, you've been on weight,
But Ma, she says, "You just watch me,
I ain't so clumsy as you think I be."
"Taint first time that I've been on skates!
Come long and out some figger eight."
But Pa said, w'en he see'd Ma on shore,
I ain't so nimble as of yore,
And I shan't have that hull crowd see
Thee a-ski, w'en you're out on one side.
So Ma, dear Ma, struck off alone,
While Pa held back a stiffed man,
As he thought of the awful aftermath
Of scattered victims who'd cross Ma's path.
Ma rambled on like a human freight
And the thin ice buckled beneath her weight,
Tryin' his best, his fears to hide.
As Ma, dear Ma, she thundered by, "high!",
For one thing, Ma had speed to burn,
But, alas! She found she couldn't turn.
And when she tried the bend to make,
She cried, "Dear me, I had a brake!"
Poor Ma skidded and turned about,
And folks all thought the ice was goin' out.
Ma sat down, w'en an awful fear
That brought an echoing groan from Pa,
Who says to Ma, "Next time take pains,
In icy going, to put on chains!"
O. R. M., Fryeburg.

A REASON

Why you should build your

Winter home on a hill.

The Overcoat you buy this year will in all probability be with you this time next year, also this time in 1923.

If you buy a poor garment now you'll need a good one in January, 1922. So why not do it right in the first place—the difference in the cost between the wheat and the chaff isn't enough to talk about. A good, all wool, shape-retaining Overcoat that will dress you up and wear you well—keep its shape and be in shape for you to wear in 1923 and 1924 and we dare say in 1925 will cost you but a trifle more than one that will be good for only one season.

Now then, if you read this advertisement—which by the way is as true as steel—and then insist on buying a Cheap Coat—then there's nothing more that we can do—is there?

Ten years from now there'll be nothing to show for those drudgery days; but there can be, say, a neat little home or a prosperous little business, or a nice big investment fund, paying dividends, for the family that has its regular banking day. Let's be practical and have one.

Maine needs the help of ALL her people

"Why do we go to the small investor to enlist him as a preferred stockholder of Central Maine Power Company?"

A fair question, surely.

We are proud to be able to answer:

1. We desire Customer Ownership. The advantages to the Company and the people it serves of such ownership are too obvious to be worth explaining.

2. We need the financial backing of every person in Maine. We believe we deserve this backing on our past record and future plans for developing the water power that has been and shall be the industrial salvation of Maine.

This vast project of power-development-to-bring-industries will, through the years, require very considerable amounts of investment money—the savings of Maine's thrifty people. It will require the co-operation not only of the banks and the wealthy men of Maine but of the tens of thousands of Maine people who have or who can save moderate amounts of money. The door of ownership is open wide to such saving people. Their help is needed, too. With other states spending hundreds of millions on water power development, Maine, to stay ahead, must surely spend millions and must keep on doing it for years to come.

Money thus invested pays dividends with wonderful certainty.

Help your own state to keep its present industrial advantage by buying Central Maine Power Company 7 per cent, Preferred Stock. Every cent available from the sale of this stock is needed to develop power, to run lines and for similar Maine-building work.

BATES—WEST PARIS

West Paris Fire

The most disastrous fire that has occurred in West Paris for more than 25 years was that of last Saturday night when three families were made homeless. We have had two mill fires in the time. At about 9:30 p. m. Rupert T. Berry who owns the hardware business was preparing to go out to solder somebody's water pipe and was working with his gasoline blow torch when it exploded and went like a flash all through his store and burning him considerably. Merton Curtis was the only one in the store at the time. He quickly went out and alarmed Frank Hill who was sitting reading a paper after the days work in his barber shop which was next door and connected with the Hardware store, and then on down the street shouting fire straight to the Paris Mfg. Co. to blow the whistle and tell the night watch to start up the steam—others went to the I. O. O. F. Hall to tell the men there, soon the hose trucks, five of them had coupled onto the hydrant and streams of water from the river were being applied. Meantime the fire spread through the whole building so quickly that Mr. Berry's wife and baby and mother who had retired in the rent over the store, barely escaped in their bed clothes. The building soon fell flat and with heroic fighting with the help of the snow covered roofs the fire was got under control though not until the large two story block consisting of a large general merchandise store and dwelling on second floor, was completely ruined although only the roof fell in, the frame work and two end gables remain standing greatly charred and soaked with water. The house part, story and half dwelling of W. W. Gardner, the G. T. station agent, at the rear of the hardware store was ruined, the ell part and barn is very little damaged. Help from South Paris and Norway was summoned and in an hour and quarter were on the spot by way of the Norway dummy train, with the firemen and hose truck etc, but the fire was under control before they got here so they did not unload anything, the firemen relieved our men and helped in many ways returning home about 2 a. m. Sunday morning. Nothing at all was saved from the Hardware store, even two or three hundred dollars in money and change in the cash register had to be left in the burning building. The explosion of a powder can and cartridges which he had in stock were frightful to hear. F. H. Hill saved his show cases, barber tools and chair.

The greater part of the goods, counters and show cases (glass all broken) from the front part of the store were removed first to the street and later into the Grange Hall dining room. Only a small part of the valuable house furnishings from the second floor were saved.

W. W. Gardner got a good part of his household furniture, including a piano removed and later stored in his barn. The Dunham two story block occupied by Charles Russell dry goods and sundries, and the rent over the live stable in the rear by Charles Curtis with additions occupied by Central telephone office, Public Library, also a vacant meat shop on one side and the Penley & Ridlon office on the other was the next across Maple street from the burning building and it kept several watching where it caught fire several times. Bucket men controlled the fire even the telephone pole near the office. The telephone girl Mrs. Ida Jacobs was on her job all the time, calling for help, calling off the electric light current for fear of live wires resulting from the fire and answering dozens of questions, expecting any time that the building would burn. Everybody concerned especially those most affected and those who were most in danger feel very thankful that it was no worse and for the heroism of all the workers and for the many things that together helped to check the fire when they did. There was snow on the roofs and ground and not a cold windy night. Many men got soaking wet, went home and put on dry clothes and came back to work until they got soaked again. Hot coffee and cocoa were passed around among the workers.

The estimated loss is valued at $20,000 or $30,000 with not nearly enough insurance to cover it.

Mr. Gardner's family have gone with their daughter, Mrs. Carl Emery and other friends. He thinks he can fix his house up so it will be passably habitable for the winter when he can finish. Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Berry have gone to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Peabody at Trap Corner. Mrs. Emma Berry has gone to Norway with her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Jackson. Mr. Jackson came up here that night as soon as he heard of the fire and took her back with him. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Lane have gone in with their son Chester on Church St.

F. H. Hill is going to set up his barber shop in the unoccupied meat shop in the Dunham block as soon as the damage to the windows can be repaired.

Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Wheeler have recently entertained the following: Capt. and Mrs. Sylvester of Portland, Capt. Sylvester spoke in the evening at the Grange Hall, Armistice Day, Dr. W. E. Webber and Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Norris of Lewiston.

Mr. and Mrs. Mont Hollis have moved into the rent recently occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hammond, next to Winnie Stevens at Trap Corner.

Delia and Minnie Lane have been spending a few days with their brother, Leonard Lane and family in Berlin. W. H. Emma A. Swan of Auburn spent Thanksgiving with her sister, Mrs. Gertrude Stuart.

At the annual chicken pie supper and sale given by the Good Will Society of the Universalist church last week the receipts were about $237.00, one of the most successful events they have ever had. The entertainment in the evening consisted of readings by Miss Baker of Portland, who is a graduate of the Leland Powers School of the Spoken Word and she delighted the audience, also Mr. Barker from Bryant's Pond and our West Paris soloist, Alise Barden were greatly applauded.

Charles Purrington and his daughter and husband Mr. and Mrs. Lane have moved into the down stairs rent owned by the Emily Field heirs, better known as the old butter factory.

Quincy A. Day is sick and confined to the house. Walter E. Cole had a bad spell Saturday night on starting for the fire, and had to call a physician but is all right now.

Services by the Federation will be held in the M. E. church for the winter months commencing next Sunday, Dec. 4th.

We Are Approaching the Completion of Our Plans for the Holiday Shopping Season

Only a few days at the most will be required to put the large new stocks in place that have been assembled for the holiday season and then we shall be enabled to say that our achievements as regards shopping attractions has been consummated.

We would, if it were practical, enumerate the thousands of beautiful gift articles that will contribute to the display, but this would be most difficult. And then, after all, it is only the personal visit that can in any way reveal the brilliancy and beauty of the merchandise and the exhibits generally throughout the whole store.

There will be no waste space—every available foot of space will be filled to its capacity with articles possessing merit, thoughtfully and carefully chosen with a view, not only to maintaining the store's usual standard of service, but to reach out, to new and broader fields of endeavor and to keep pace with the growth and development of the business which, as the years roll around surely is growing and improving all the time. And for this there is a reason, undoubtedly the invariably good service that is rendered.

FARM AND CITY LIFE

Often in reading articles in the Advertiser, and other papers as well, I have come upon the old subject relating to the abandonment of the old farm homes.

Usually the fact seems to have made the writer feel homesick and lonesome, and to deplore the fact that they are so abandoned. In many cases, as was true in an article published in the Advertiser some time ago, this question was propounded: "Why this abandonment?" Now I am not going to pick that interesting article entitled "Wayside Sketches" apart by any means. In this article the writer gave a clear and honest statement of things as they seemed to him, while I am writing over the road, and I have had the same thoughts brought to me while passing over that and similar routes. Really now, what fact facing us today is more pathetic than the abandonment of our old homes on the farm. Perhaps I should say that henceforth I now live in town, I was raised on a farm and I lived there until I was old enough to run the farm for my own interests, in fact until I was over twenty-five years old. I am a member of the Grange and at heart I am a farmer still, with the farmers' interests always first in view; and no one deplores the Old Home Farm Abandonment more than I.

I will also confess, I abandoned a farm to come to town, the Old Home Farm at that. Bushes and weeds are growing in my fathers well kept fields and in my mothers flower garden. Where "we boys" once romped with fields in the front yard now grow thistles, burdocks and tall grass. The once bright, happy rooms are now silent and left to the rats and spiders. Our old home is a common example of the abandoned farm, and why this abandonment? I would not try to give the theory on the cure, but perhaps if I try to answer "Why?" a few pre-emptive hints may be brought out.

I am going to outline the course of events which led me to abandon the farm. My case may not correspond to all, but I know by observation that it will to some. First I am going to please my sister Grangers by stating that their part of the problem is the largest and needs the most adjusting. A change from farm life to town life usually better conditions for a woman much more than it does for a man. My experience has been that I always had to work as hard as I could jump to get a living regardless of where I was; but for my wife and mother the change was extremely vast and pleasing. From a woman's standpoint there are two elements prominent in causing them to refuse to remain on the farm. One is the Social Element, and one is the Material Element. I am going to consider my family's case from the Social standpoint first. By "Social Element" I mean the society of others only, or freedom from isolation. This is an element which is very hard to control, while the material element is left very much in the hands of us menfolk, and I am ashamed to say, very much neglected by most of us, and almost criminally so by some.

Returning to the Social Element, I am going to begin way back to the time when my brothers and myself were small. Our home was three miles from the small village, and situated in a fertile valley which was very beautiful in summer, but terribly isolated in winter. I have known whole days to pass when not even a team passed along the road. My mother felt this isolation keenly because she craved companionship, and desired to talk with other women to get new ideas, exchange views, and many other things which must be derived from association with others.

In winter I have known two whole months to pass when my mother would not hear the voice of any person of her own sex, and would see and talk with the members of her own immediate family only. Such isolation was due to deep snows, busy horses and men, and long hours of hard work for her as she not only had to cook and sew and mend, but attend to the churning, butter making, feeding stock at noon, cooking hog feed, and also spin and knit socks and mittens for the whole family.

Before I was fifteen years old I have been called from bed by my mother, would get up, dress, go to the barn and milk a few cows and do other chores, then come in to a big hot breakfast which my mother had prepared, then seize my dinner pail she had filled, pull my axe from the chopping block and wallow one or two miles in deep snow to the woodlot and have my first tree down before the sun rose over the eastern hills.

I would often finish piling up the product of my days work after sunset and wallow back home by starlight, do my chores and then have my supper. I was tired enough, but my mother was still at it as the dishes and milk pails must be washed after that.

I know some mothers on the farms do not have it so hard, and some will say "We all have flivvers now and can go Norway Grange, and many others were more."

So did we have a flivver after the flivver factory was invented and began to put some on the market at a reasonable price, but this was snowed in for nearly six months of the year, while here in town I use my car the year round. We did not care more after we had the flivver and saw how our city cousins got along and my wife and mother absolutely refused to stay shut up and isolated any longer and I didn't blame them.

Now the Church, Library Eastern Star, Rebekahs, Grange, and many other social avenues are but a few steps from our door, and regardless of whether it is winter or summer, ten minutes from our fireside takes us to any of these; stores, motion pictures, and dances included. And besides, I still have a good big garden, beans, apple, peach, and pear trees, cultivated raspberries and blackberries, and fresh milk still warm from the cow delivered to my door.

Some of these conditions may seem far fetched, or out of the ordinary, but they or similar conditions are living right with us on our farms today, and though we may dislike to admit it, we might as well face the truth that this isolation is one of the strongest elements which is working toward the abandonment of our farms today. The fact is our daughters of today will not agree to isolate themselves from their own kind to any great extent even though the best man in the world wishes to remain on the old home farm where peace and beauty and independence reigns supreme in the well cultivated fields and shaded pastures. And can we well blame them for feeling so?

The "Material Element" could be well handled if our farmers were educated to the need. After your wife fusses over smoky lamps for years then visits her sister in the city to see her simply turn a switch and get better light than any kerosene lamp ever produced it is no wonder that her next evening at home seems dingy and oily and smoky.

A bathroom in the house, a good heating system, a water system, and electric lights would greatly change the aspect of the farm home to the prospective bride, and almost invariably all these things can be had just as well as not if we only could be made to realize their necessity.

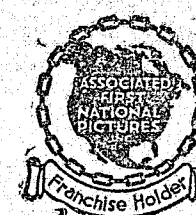

As I have already said the Material Element can be handled and is becoming so more and more each year. But the Social Element still has us all staggered except in thickly settled communities. The Grange has done more in this line than anything else and has been invaluable in many ways to the people in rural sections. My folks all look ahead to Grange night, and we always tried to go if the snow wasn't too deep, if the horses were not too tired, if the days work and chores were finished in time, if we were not too tired to get ready, and if—well you all know how it is.

I was never so much impressed by the value of the Grange as a social element until once in March I attended the Oxford County Pomona at West Paris. At the roll call the familiar names of Bear Mountain Grange, East Hebron Grange, Frederic, Robie Grange, Oxford Grange, responded to by a great many members, men, women, boys, and girls, and everyone was enjoying themselves, and it occurred to me then that this was what the farming communities needed most of all. That more such events and more getting together of many families and friends, working for a common interest and for entertainment, would greatly help in solving the social problem for the people on the farms.

"THE LOST ROMANCE"

Starring Lois Wilson, Conrad Nagel, Jack Holt, Fontaine LaRue

A story of a million married lives, throbbing in and hearts of one wife and one husband. Both yearning for the vanished thrill of sweetheart love. Both wondering why the passing years of marriage should steal away romance. So, drifting apart, the man plunged into the world's affairs. The woman, in spite of her child and her vows, turned to an old-time lover. Until the great and terrible thing crashed into their home! And taught them how true romance may live! A picture with all the allurements and charm of William DeMille's Midsummer Madness, yet finer and deeper far.

BATES—WEST PARIS

Hanibal G. Brown
Hanibal Gardner Brown an aged resident died at his home Monday morning, Nov. 21st at the age of nearly 92, after an illness of only about 24 hours of colic and indigestion followed by heart failure. He was one of seven children of John and Hulda Gardner Brown, only one sister survives him, Maria E. Brown of Massachusetts. He married Mary Parlin of Paris, May 23, 1853. Mrs. Brown although in very feeble health survives him.

Three children were born to him, two of whom are living, Edwin H. Brown of Rumford and Jennie M. wife of Will F. Dunham of East Sausage, Mass. and one grandson, Charles L. Brown of Rumford. He was born in Plymouth, Dec. 18, 1829.

Mr. Brown's chances for an education were limited having the privilege only of the winter terms at South Paris but he was an earnest student and great mathematician. He studied surveying and was a great reader, a fluent speaker always being able to put forth his views in public as his clear and well balanced high principled mind saw the situation. His standard of justice, morals and temperance were firm and decided. He served the town as selectman and was justice of peace for many years and many times was urged to accept a nomination for senator or representative but declined.

In 1862 he was appointed collector of internal revenue and held the position with honor. Mr. Brown purchased a farm years ago which was the site of the village of West Paris. He laid out the village and sold lots at a low figure on condition that houses would soon be built. He saw it grow from one mill and one house and store to its present development and prosperity.

In politics he was a republican. Although denied the privilege of being a civil war veteran on account of a slight physical defect he had brothers who were soldiers and he could deliver a memorial speech equal to one who had all the experiences of a soldier. His religious preference was Universalist and he and Mrs. Brown sang in the church choir for many years.

Although a successful business man he was met with adversity by fire and other losses. He was an early member of the West Paris I. O. O. F.

The funeral services were held at 10 a. m. Thanksgiving Day in the Universalist church attended by Rev. H. A. Markley. A mixed quartette sang two selections one of which was a special favorite "Over the Jasper Sea." The Odd Fellows attended in a body and performed their burial service. A noble, influential man in a ripe old age has finished his course and gone to his reward, and his works do follow him.

Radcliff-Moody

Thomas A. Radcliff and Myrtle M. Moody of Albany accompanied by his mother Mrs. Jennie Estes went to the M. E. parsonage and were quietly married by Rev. H. F. Aldrich Sunday, Nov. 27th. The double ring service being used. On their return, Mrs. Estes prepared a wedding dinner of baked chicken with the usual accompaniments, plum pudding, fancy crackers etc. The newly-weds stayed for a visit until Tuesday when they returned to their home in Albany.

VERY MUCH AWAKE

There may have been a time when the residents of a small country town or a farming district took little or no interest in affairs outside of their own local community, other than to vote their straight party tickets at election time.

But that time is not now. It has not been for many years.

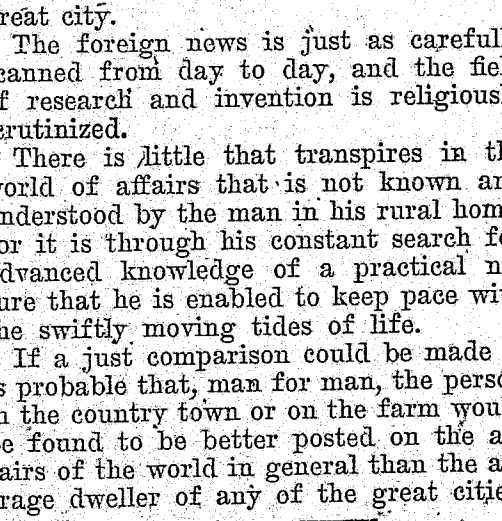

The man behind the counter or the plow is just as vitally interested in state and national affairs as is his cousin in the great city.

This reign news is just as carefully scanned from day to day, and the field of research and invention is religiously scrutinized.

There is little that transpires in the world of affairs that is not known and understood by the man in his room, for it is through his constant search for advanced knowledge of a practical nature that he is enabled to keep pace with the swiftly moving tides of life.

If a just comparison could be made it is probable that, man for man, the person in the country town or on the farm would be found to be better posted on the affairs of the world in general than the average dweller of any of the great cities.

Her exact age is not known, being reckoned by some as ninety-five and by others as one hundred and four.

The lecture on "Jinrickshaw Land" at the Baptist Church on Sunday evening was very fine. Next Sunday the subject will be "Children of Europe."

TAXATION AND HIGH COST OF LIVING

Business World Parley
An interesting suggestion comes from the only business economist sitting at the Washington disarmament conference, Jean L. Duplan, who is a French silk manufacturer. He points the need of a business conference among the nations to take immediate and constructive advantage of the acceptance of the ten-year naval treaty. It is his argument that trade is not merely a sale, it is an exchange; and although he calls himself a protectionist he warns against perils of tariff that protects the laborer but do not protect his product by providing for its exchange for what is needed from other countries. No one can only sell. He must also buy. Says he:

"Why is it that the United States, with all its gold, has more unemployed than has Germany? Why should not the great business men of all countries get together and frame a program for definite action? The United States with its wonderful resources, its cotton, oil and wheat, should plan for a world trade and should plan to give and take and should consider that she needs things from other countries. She should invite those other countries to participate in the making of her tariff regulations and then should insist that she have a voice in theirs."

Mr. Duplan is perfectly agreed to having such a world business conference called in Washington, with such men as Gary and Swab as leaders for the United States. The plan is already as unique and startling as the proposition for the disarmament conference; and there is little doubt but much good would come from a spirit of international business co-operation, in which each country would seek its own commercial advantage while working at the same time for the common welfare of all insofar as this is possible.

We would only be applying to international trade the spirit of co-operation seen in any city where merchants get together to act for the common good of their concerns, even though the latter are individual competitors, one against the other.—Lewiston Journal.

Another Trust Surrenders

Another building trust, as a result of the investigation of the Lockwood committee, has found it wise to surrender rather than prolong the struggle in the courts, in the face of overwhelming evidence. This is the Marble Industry Employers' Association of New York, comprising thirty-four individuals and twenty-five corporations. The trial, under the Donnelly anti-trust law, was begun last May. An associated group in the same industry, composed of nineteen individuals and thirteen corporations, concluded that discretion was the better part of valor, and pleaded guilty at the beginning of the prosecution. The present group has carried little if anything by deferring a similar plea. The charge is that they have pleaded guilty to a trade in this industry to fix prices and to control the attitude of members by threats of fines, suspension, or expulsion. The methods used to argue essentially those of the Hettrick-Brindell type; and their success, if they had ultimately been successful, would have established a complete monopoly in the building trade in New York, making it impossible for anyone not in the combine either to buy materials or secure contracts.

Hettrick and Brindell, leaders in this conspiracy, are now paying the penalty, and the latest group of building trade profiteers will be sentenced on Nov. 28th. The statutes provide maximum individual penalties of one year in prison and a fine of $500, while corporations may be fined $20,000. It is expected that some of the defendants will receive lighter sentences than others, according to the degree of their activities in the illegal combine. The prosecution in these cases was brought under state law, before Justice McAvoy in the criminal branch of the supreme court, and it was halted, after the evidence was heard, by a withdrawal of the plea of not guilty by the defense.—Boston Journal.

One by one the profiteers will get their deserts. Congress has adjourned. It did little towards reducing the high cost of living and reducing normal conditions. It did nothing to relieve the situation. The Government Boards have not helped any worthy of mention. If these had been an election this year, some of the politicians would have been mightily shook up.—Editorial Comment.

"The R. I. corporations demand that wages be reduced, as well as freight rates. This is right as also being sound business proposition."—Editorial Comment.

Oscar Bennett is a thrifty farmer and a good business man. He sells his milk for ten cents a quart and makes a fair profit. Why cannot the other dealers? Perhaps they intend to reduce the price to Mr. Bennett's standard Dec. 1st. We will wait and see.—Citizen.

her remarkable experience with Tanlac as follows:

finally even that went against me.

"Before I had finished the first bottle of Tanlac I got so I could eat anything, years to my life. The people in my
